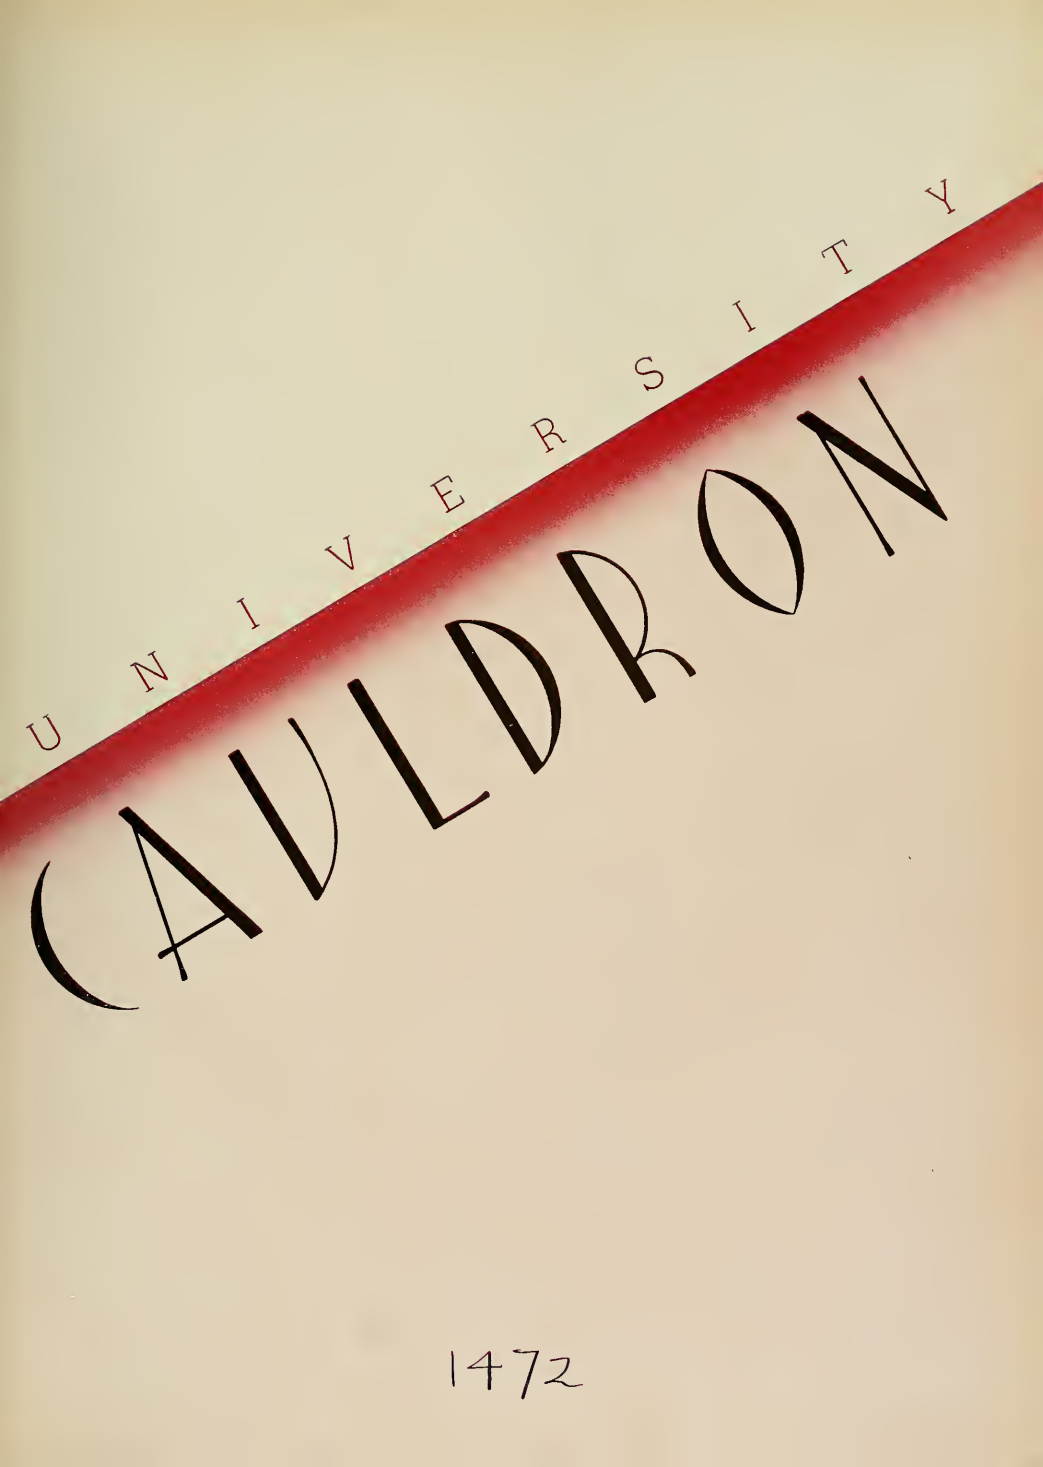
NINETEEN THIRTY-SIX
SENIOR ANNUAL OF

NORTHEASTERN



1972

THE 1936 Cauldron Board presents this book to the Class with the hope that its pages may bring to you in later years memories of the happy hours and pleasant turmoil that is Northeastern. If time serves to increase the value of Volume XV as a reminder of the friendships made at Northeastern, its purpose will have been accomplished.

Faculty Adviser

The Class of 1936
dedicates Volume XV of the Cauldron to Professor Albert Edward Whittaker whose sincere advice and generous counsel for five years has proved invaluable

THE Cauldron Board wishes to acknowledge the debt of gratitude owed to its faculty adviser Professor Everett C. Marston for the untiring interest and the valuable suggestions rendered during the compilation and publication of this yearbook. The Editors are also very grateful to Mr. Dino G. Valz for his excellent advice and assistance in arrangement and to Mr. Russell C. Knight for his expert aid in the design and layout.

CLASS HISTORY

MARCH has her wind, April has her showers, and September has her—Freshmen. So it was with the September of 1931, only more so, because We the Class of 1936 then came to the threshold of Northeastern and demanded an education. Well, not exactly demanded, for most of us were too bewildered to ask even for a drink of water.

Bewildered, did I say? That's putting it mildly. We were given paper upon paper with complete directions as to where to go and what to do. We went and we did...All this was comparatively easy, but when the Army Alpha and other intelligence tests, with a Math test tossed in for good measure, were lavishly spread before us, matters seemed to become more involved, and higher education seemed a grim and serious business. But eventually we were sufficiently oriented to satisfy anybody.

After a hectic week, life started in a more normal way. We could be seen dashing across our campus, dodging street cars and automobiles as though we had been doing it since time began. We began to see sights and absorb environment, as well as to study courses. The most perplexing question that agitated the collective mind of the Class was, how in the world would we keep our ears warm with the silly red bonnets that emphasized our social and academic status?

We had a Rush. The less said about this fracas the better. We were put decidedly in the red by the Sophomores. The score—forget it. The incidental point that we of '36 like to remember is that the I. Q.'s of our class were over and above those of '35. If taken with a liberal grain of salt, this proves that the Rush was a contest of Mind vs. Muscle. Muscle won the Rush but Mind won the Moral Victory. However that may be, after the Rush was over we buried the hatchet (which was dug up the next fall for another class of frosh to bury again).

But we weren't being pushed around by the Sophomores all of the time. Oh, no. We ran a dance, and pushed each other around.

Every class must have officers; otherwise, how can it hold class meetings, collect money for Senior Week, and do all of those other things so vital to the common good? So in the course of time we bestowed the following honors: Presidents, Eugene Middendorf and Roger Lund; Vice-Presidents, Paul Craven and Joseph Driscoll; Secretaries, Paul Spencer and Kenneth MacKenzie; Treasurers, David Bourque and Hugh Phillips. And a callow, wet-behind-the-ears double quartet they were—if you don't believe it, look in the 1932 CAULDRON. In the meantime Professor Whittaker had become the class adviser. With his guiding touch the officers steered the class through a successful year, the first of five.

Field Day is the day on which Freshmen and Seniors meet on common ground. In the spring of 1932, We met—with appropriate pomp and ceremony—the graduating class, which presented us with their colors. Black and orange they were, and are, and will be, until We, at our last Field Day, pass them on to this year's Sons of September.

We weren't always freshmen. After a summer of sublime idleness—except for the poor unfortunates who worked—we returned as Sophomores. The annual Rush was omitted from the program of the year, and we were thereby deprived of sweet revenge.

We elected more officers for the Class. This time they were: Presidents, Eugene Middendorf and Gilbert Williams; Vice-Presidents, David Bourque and Joseph Driscoll; Secretaries, William Grady and Kenneth MacKenzie; and Treasurers, John Sweeney and Charles Whitney.

This year as a whole was rather uneventful, although "Husky-the-Mascot" won three prizes in a dog show, and later, by stealth, evacuated his kennel at Dean Ell's house and raised havoc with a near-by brood of chickens. Husky was recovered, but the chickens weren't.

The freshmen had a football team and did nobly in winning three out of four for old N.U. This feat, apparently, was the the straw that broke the camel's back, for next year varsity football was inaugurated at Northeastern. And incidentally, the Class of 1936 added both materially and spiritually to this great inovation.

The News, ever alert, brought forth an extra edition to announce that new buildings would be erected in the near future. The ground for these buildings has been broken from time to time, quite unceremoniously, by various unprejudiced N.Y.A. boys. The buildings themselves have not appeared, but one who knows tells us they are on the way.

We returned for the third year and were obliged to blunder through twenty weeks under the extreme handicap of being referred to as Middlers. Handicap, says you? Why, of course, says I. Have you ever computed, even in rough averages, the number of times well-meaning friends have called upon you to explain why you were called a Middler? Why a third-year man isn't a Junior? Why you had to go to school for five years? What co-op means? Twenty weeks of all this were enough, for we all had started to chew our fingernails.

This third year of ours had several features. One was the first session of varsity football, with the lads turning in a successful season against colleges who were veterans of the sport.

The Student Union organized a Freshman Camp. Here freshmen were able to spend an orienting week-end, getting acquainted with the other members of their class, and doing it in pleasant surroundings.

That summer a coaching school was introduced, with prominent figures in the world of sport as its faculty.

A College of Liberal Arts was given some advance publicity.

Keeping up the boys-will-be-boys tradition, the News issued an April Fool number that was promptly censored. In fact it was banned. In fact it was squelched. Bootleg copies, appropriately autographed, sold as high as fifty cents. Incidentally, the paper still is funny.

The government came to the assistance of students who were financially embarrassed. While no statistics are available, it is safe to say that a number of us wouldn't be on the verge of becoming alumni were it not for that aid provided by the government.

Then there were the officers, much more suave and insidious than they had been as Freshmen. The Middler Statesmen were: Presidents, Roger Lund and Frank Jameson; Vice-Presidents, David Bourque and Joseph Driscoll (the Vice-President business was getting to be a habit with Driscoll); Secretaries, Albert Daly and James Dallas; Treasurers, John Sweeney and James Carlin.

Returning in the fall of 1934, we had nothing much to look forward to except studying and, of course, the Junior Prom. From a senior's point of view the Junior Prom is a dance that occurs during the junior years and is fussed over a great deal. It's a dance that you start saving for when you are a middler, and you spend it all in one store. Really it's much like any dance, except that you have a more popular orchestra, you go formal, your girls gets a favor, and you spend a lot of money that you might have done lots of other things with. Only that isn't what you think when you're a junior; then it's the Big Event.

The men who ran the class, while the Prom Committee provided the fancy touches, were: Presidents, David Bourque and Eugene Middendorf; Vice-Presidents, Allen Shippee and Joseph (Hardy Perennial) Driscoll; Secretaries, Albert Daly and Charles Davis; Treasurers, John Sweeney (who also was doing pretty well as a repeater-officer by now) and James Carlin.

When you become a five-year-old Son of September, when you return for your last semester, you are a man with a name, a man among men, a Senior—as long as you're not deficient in any subjects. The senior year isn't exactly a rest cure, for the time you don't spend on your thesis you spend worrying about it. And if you don't spend any time doing it or worrying about it, you're either a junior or a B.A. or a genius. You begin to ease out of activities and take more interest in class affairs. You begin to plan for Senior Week, and to argue for or against its program, more strongly against it if you aren't going anyway. You spend some of your spare time panning the CAULDRON. You begin to wonder about the future. You begin to speculate about Life. You plot curves to determine the answer to the question, can two live on less than one? All in all, it really is a very busy year.

And now that its end is drawing near, speculation fades, to be replaced by real problems, wolves at doors, and things like that. Were there a reduction in tuition, some might attempt to start in as freshmen again. At least you would be secure for five years more, or would you?

Reviews of this sort always end in heartening pep talks, with overtones of optimism. Excessive optimism would be just whistling in the dark. And because we don't whistle well, let's end by saying, "Here's to US! Good men still are scarce."

Good Yearbooks Don't "Just Happen"

THEY may vary tremendously in size, design, and cost, but all successful yearbooks have one thing in common—they represent hours of careful planning and painstaking workmanship.

The 1936 Cauldron is no exception. The staff has worked long and diligently in order to make it an interesting and accurate record of the college year.

It has been our privilege to assist in the publication of the book, working in close association with the members of the board. We wish to take this opportunity to thank them for their co-operation and to congratulate them on the results of their labors.

NORTHEASTERN UNIVERSITY

DAY DIVISION

The three colleges of the Day Division of Northeastern University are conducted on the co-operative plan. After the freshman year students may alternate their periods of study with periods of work in the employ of business or industrial concerns at ten-week intervals. Under this plan they gain practical experience and earn a large part of their college expenses.

COLLEGE OF LIBERAL ARTS

Offers a broad program of college subjects serving as a foundation for the understanding of modern culture, social relations, and technical achievement. Varied opportunities available for vocational specialization. Degree: Bachelor of Science or Bachelor of Arts.

COLLEGE OF ENGINEERING

Offers curricula in Civil, Mechanical, Electrical, Chemical, and Industrial Engineering. Classroom study is supplemented by experiment and research in well-equipped laboratories. Degree: Bachelor of Science in the professional field of specialization.

COLLEGE OF BUSINESS ADMINISTRATION

Offers three curricula: Accounting, Banking and Finance, and Business Management. Each curriculum represents in itself a broad survey of business technique, differing from the others chiefly in emphasis. Degree: Bachelor of Science in Business Administration.

EVENING DIVISION

(Admits Men and Women)

The schools of the Evening Division of Northeastern University offer classes for employed men and women at convenient evening hours. Students are thereby able to attend school and continue their regular employment.

SCHOOL OF LAW

Curriculum leading to the degree of Bachelor of Laws. Preparation for the practice of the law. Graduates eligible for the Massachusetts Bar Examinations. Case method of instruction. Graduate program leading to the degree of Master of Laws.

SCHOOL OF BUSINESS

Curricula in Accounting, Business Administration, Law and Business, and Engineering and Business leading to the degree of Bachelor of Business Administration in specified fields. Preparation for C.P.A. Examinations. Shorter programs may be arranged.

For further information concerning any of the above schools, write or telephone to the Dean of the School in which you are interested.
